Minister Shanmugam, Mr Louis Ng, Er. Dr. Lee Bee Wah and Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim went on the Yishun Integrated Transport Hub familiarisation tour to ensure bus operations run smoothly.

Hailed as an air-conditioned bus interchange with many "firsts" under its belt, Yishun Integrated Transport Hub (YITH) opened its doors to the public on 8 September 2019. The first bus interchange with two Heart Zones, it is also the first dedicated inclusive service training centre, and the first bus interchange appointed by the Agency for Integrated Care (AIC) as a Dementia Go-To Point (GTP). MPs for Nee Soon GRC Minister K Shanmugam, Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim, Er. Dr. Lee Bee Wah and Mr Louis Ng went on a familiarisation tour conducted by SMRT staff.

SMRT Buses signed a Memorandum of Understanding on 23 August with AIC, the Alzheimer's Disease Association (ADA), Guide Dogs Singapore (GDS), Handicaps Welfare Association (HWA), and Singapore Association of the Visually Handicapped (SAVH) to equip its staff with relevant training to support those with dementia and disabilities.

Minister Shanmugam said: "A lot of thought was given to making the hub more inclusive. People recognise that this is a very different town from 10 years ago, with more developments coming (that) greatly enhance the quality of life in Yishun." 义顺综合交通中心2019年9月8日启用。这个冷气巴士转换站有许多 前所未有的新设施,如2个"爱心相助站"。同时,它是首所包容性服 务培训中心,也是首个指定为"失智关怀站"的巴士转换站。在开幕 前,义顺集选区议员尚穆根部长、费绍尔副教授、李美花博士与黄国 光先生参观了转换站。

尚穆根部长说: "当局经过深思熟虑,使综合交通中心更具包容性。 居民们都认识到,我们的市镇已经和10年前截然不同。接下来还有更 多设施,义顺居民的生活品质将会大幅度提升。"

费绍尔副教授说:"义顺综合交通中心是个好例子,展现我们如何充分利用设计为国人营造更包容性的交通环境,包括乐龄人士、残障人士 及有年幼小孩的家庭。"

Mr Law King Lan, 60

"As a wheelchair user, I am glad that the new interchange is fully barrier-free; I can go anywhere I want without fear of the rain as it is all sheltered. Today I am here to explore how to go to the Yishun MRT from this bus interchange. It's like homecoming – the first Yishun bus interchange was built here too?

Ms Lisa, 42

"I frequently come to this place, for the various takeaways at the shopping mall, and grocery shopping at the Sheng Siong supermarket. It's cooler and more convenient to come here now.

Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim said: "YITH is a very good example of how we can better leverage design to create a more inclusive environment for commuters including the elderly, persons with disabilities and families with young children."

Second Day Rush-Hour Jam Eased Within A Day

A traffic jam at the traffic light junction outside the interchange was spotted on 9 September morning. In response, three measures to help ease the jam were swiftly implemented. These include:

- Adjusting the timings of the traffic lights
- Deploying more marshals to control traffic flow into and around the transport hub
- During peak hours, buses that have not started their shifts were not allowed to turn into the interchange. Nee Soon MPs and volunteers closely monitored the handling of the situation. Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim also updated residents of the situation on Facebook Live.

YITH is located within Northpoint City

Getting to YITH from Yishun MRT:

- 1. Take Exit D from the MRT Station towards Northpoint City
- 2. Proceed past the shops to "Swee Heng 1989" Bakery
- 3. Take escalators next to the bakery up to level 1
- 4. One of the entrance to YITH is next to Heavenly Wang at Level 1

NDP 2019 LIVE SCREENING ALFRESCOG

Around 2,000 residents gathered to watch the National Day Parade (NDP) live screening at the hardcourt beside Yishun MRT station on 9 August. The cosy outdoor gathering harked back to kampung days, when enjoying a TV programme was a group activity at the house of a rich neighbour who owned a TV.

Eyes were riveted to the wide screen as NDP performances panned out, especially during the soulful rendition of this year's theme song "Our Singapore". Nee Soon MP Mr K Shanmugam was at the live screening to celebrate Singapore's birthday with residents, while the other MPs were at the Padang for the main celebration.

The huge screen awed Ridha bin Farok, 36. "The atmosphere is better because of the carnival," he added.

Lin Jing Kang, 35, echoed this sentiment. "This live screening brings everybody together; it's more exciting, more vibrant, like old times. It's the company of people that is important, the more the merrier," Jing Kang explained. "It's good to document history and have celebrations like these," he added.

A pasar malam (night bazaar) and carnival was also held at the hardcourt. Free snacks such as Dragon's Breath candy, seaweed fries and popcorn were given out to delighted residents. Mr Shanmugam posed for photos with residents at the carnival's breathtaking futuristic light displays.

An inclusive Nee Soon Central

NATIONAL DAY

The National Day Parade (NDP) Mobile Column took to the heartlands for the first time on 10 August, passing by Block 749 Yishun Street 72 where 200 Nee Soon Central residents gathered to witness the momentous drive-past. Among the 200 were some special invitees whose beaming smiles expressed their joy at having front-row views to this unique spectacle.

4 The Nee Soon Link

These special invitees – beneficiaries of the Sree Narayana Mission Nursing Home – experienced a memorable National Day that involved watching live band performances and a magic show, participating in a lucky draw, and receiving freebies. They were hosted by students from Yishun Town Secondary School, as part of a specially planned programme organised by Nee Soon Central Zone 2 Residents' Committee (RC).

Recognising that these beneficiaries may not have the chance to experience heartland celebrations, or the actual NDP at the Padang, the event planning team decided instead to bring the celebrations to the beneficiaries. The team leveraged on the pavilion at Block 749 to drive home the space's objective of being a focal point for various pockets of the community to come together.

Guest-of-honour for the event, Nee Soon MP Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim, joined attendees for the celebrations at the pavilion.

LEGENDS AND MEMORIES OF MEBUN BARU MEBUN BARU MEMORIES OF MEBUN BARU MEMORIES OF MEDISON

Kebun Baru residents celebrated their town's colourful heritage and the living legends among them on 22 June 2019 at Down the Memory Lane @ Kebun Baru. The nostalgia-themed event held at Kebun Baru Community Club was also a heartland Bicentennial celebration.

Kebun Baru MP Mr Henry Kwek kicked off the celebrations by introducing an audio-visual presentation on vintage gramophones by Mr David Row. Residents were rewarded with a full-fidelity listening experience of warm vinyl music emanating from antique gramophones like the Edison Phonograph 1877, which had a wax cylinder, and the world's first gramophone, which was invented in 1887. A renaissance ambience permeated the air as oldies such as "It's a Long Way to Tipperary", "Hong Deng Lu Jiu Ye (红灯绿酒夜)" and "Bunga Sakaru" were played from vinyl records. Mr Looi Im Heok, a living legend who won the 1966 Singapore Grand Prix Motorcycle Championship, was also present at the event.

Exhibition panels depicting famous landmarks past and present, such as the Kebun Baru Bird Singing Club, the Teacher's Estate, and Hainanese Village, made for an educational tour on the town's vibrant past. Internet-savvy residents scanned QR codes on the panels to listen to deep-dive interviews on these places as well as their neighbourhood heroes.

One living legend is Singapore's last surviving "Flying Tiger" Captain Ho Weng Toh. Volunteer World War II pilots who fought against the armies of Imperial Japan in China were known as "Flying Tigers". In total, he flew on 18 missions in a B-25 Bomber. He later settled down in Singapore, raised three children and retired as Chief Pilot with Singapore Airlines in 1980.

Residents also revisited their days of youth through games of yesteryear, like hopscotch and pick-up sticks. Margaret See, a resident who has lived in Kebun Baru for more than 40 years, was in high spirits. "It's convenient and comfortable to live here, people know me, and I also know them. I am looking forward to the new Mayflower MRT."

nore's Last Surviving Fly

On 3 September 2019, the Town Council announced that it is partnering with BEE aMAZEd Garden to relocate bees found in the estates. What led to this partnership, and how does it involve Nee Soon residents? We speak to BEE aMAZEd founder Mr John Chong to dig out the details.

What's the deal with bees?

"Without bees, one third of our food sources will be gone," declared Mr Chong. It's not just berries and fruit plants that bees help pollinate. Bees are also responsible for pollination of grass and clover, which are cattle feed, and hence are important contributors to the meat and dairy industries.

All over the world, "bee population is on the decline". "In some parts of China, people have to climb trees to pollinate the flowers," Mr Chong said. There has also been talk of using drones for pollination. While these methods are innovative, he feels that the best solution is to "let nature do its work". Bees are the solution to pollination.

Marriage of minds

BEE aMAZEd Garden has been sited at Lorong Chencharu for two years, but it was only in September this year that its partnership with the Town Council materialised. Mr Chong's presentation at a Nee Soon South Sparkletots' Science Day in July sparked a conversation on beekeeping between him and Nee Soon South MP Er. Dr. Lee Bee Wah.

Having recognised the significant role bees play in ecosystem sustainability, the Town Council then announced in September that they would work with BEE aMAZEd, and bee-friendly pest control companies, to manage residents' queries and concerns about bees in the estates.

Beekeeping – a global practice

Beekeeping culture is alive in other parts of the world. Rooftop beekeeping, for example, is a practice at top New York hotels like Waldorf Astoria and the Hilton. These bee gardens are even managed by a resident beekeeper.

Brisbane, Australia, is an excellent example of a beefriendly community. Mr Chong had been walking at Roma Street Parkland, a garden near the central business district, when he noticed two colonies of bees. "[The authorities] just put a sign there: 'Beware – two newly relocated beehives'. Just like that! No barrier, no net, nothing! Just a sign. It was very mind-boggling for me," he said, chuckling. "In Singapore, I think a lot of people will complain to NParks and say 'Aiyo, destroy them lah, before they sting my children," he said wryly.

Utrecht, in the Netherlands, saw a 45% growth in the bee population after flowers, bushes, and trees were planted along highways, roads, and even bus stop roofs.

No magic tricks, just science

The BEE aMAZEd-Nee Soon Town Council partnership is a small but significant step towards "making Singapore bee-friendly again", said Mr Chong. Those interested in learning about bees, or want to observe bees, can do so by visiting BEE aMAZEd. They may even get to observe how Mr Chong approaches his colony of 30,000 local honey bees (Apis Cerana) without getting himself stung. It is not a magic trick. In fact, not getting stung is as simple as remaining calm around bees. When fear kicks in, people tend to get agitated, provoking the bees.

In every BEE aMAZEd class, Mr Chong will come across at least one participant with a fear of bees. He was not always fond of bees either. "When I was a school principal, a colony of bees came to my compound. When I noticed them, I was paranoid. I directed my Operations Manager to call the pest control to kill them. Now that I am a beekeper, I know that was my mistake."

A lot of this fear and dislike of bees stems from lack of understanding. African killer bees - the most aggressive bee species - do not exist in Singapore. The most aggressive species here is the Asian Giant Bee. They are normally found in nature reserves, and in very tall trees six to seven storeys high. Mr Chong said: "Because the hive of the Asian Giant Bees is so high up in the trees, how can they be a threat or danger to

Bee Ready for a Bee Encounter

Wherever there are plants – even grass – bees can be found. However, this is no cause for alarm. In fact, the best way to prevent a bee encounter from ending with someone getting stung is to move slowly away from the bees. Think of it as a stealth mission where your objective is to escape undetected.

Think statue

Avoid being detected, and provoking an unnecessary attack, by staying calm and still – just like a statue. Keep your hands to yourself This may be difficult as many of us reflexively swat at insects. Relax your hands and let them drop to your sides. Make as though you're standing at attention. Retreat! Back away from the bees v-e-r-y slowly to avoid agitating them. You don't want to draw

If you've encountered a colony of bees and have sufficient reason to believe they might cause inconvenience to humans, contact the Town Council to request for an assessment of the colony. The Town Council will work with BEE aMAZEd to assess the situation, and relocate the bees if it is deemed necessary.

Seek medical attention immediately if you display severe symptoms of allergy after being stung. Severe symptoms include breathlessness, wheezing, and feeling weak.

What You Didn't Know About Bees

Enough to fit onto a plastic stirrer

That's about the maximum amount of honey a single honey bee produces in its lifetime.

Bees are friends to butterflies

Both insects are great pollinators. That's why it's likely that you'll find bees wherever there are butterflies.

They have their honey – and eat it

Bees produce honey for their own consumption. However, they typically produce 2-3 times more honey than they can consume, allowing humans to enjoy it too!

They hate stinging you

Bees don't want to sting people just as much as people don't want to be stung. That's because bees die after stinging something.

anyone, unless we deliberately provoke them?"

Inside the mind of a beekeeper

Ultimately, Mr Chong's love for bees stems from a deep understanding about the insects' habits and characteristics. "Bees will take whatever natural resources available within their means [to collect the] pollen and then make it into honey," he observed. In this aspect, humans can learn from the insect's industrious nature. "I use bees as an analogy to teach [participants of BEE aMAZEd's programmes] how to be resilient – all the good values," he added.

Mr Chong's ultimate dream is to work with community gardeners in Singapore to keep bees safely and responsibly. Beekeeping done right, which is with lots of love and care, would produce "gentler", safer bees, he says.

"But then also, bees are just like human beings. You can train up a child, [and] the child can be nice, but the child can also be very nasty. Why some children can be very nasty, because we mistreat the child," he mused. "When you go and treat your bees with love and care, they are gentler. But if you mistreat your bees... Same thing like when you mistreat your own children lah. You bring up children who are nasty, angry, defiant, and always wanting to cause trouble."

CHEAP EATS IN KEBUN BARU UNDER 🕄 🥠

You can easily find quality food below $3 at Mayflower Food Centre in Kebun Baru.

House of Li Xiang Location: Mayflower Food Centre, #01-17 Mee Siam @ $2.50 Mee Rebus @ $2.50

The word "just right" creeps into one's consciousness when you eat this stall's mee siam and mee rebus. Garnished with fried tofu, calamansi lime, hardboiled egg and chives, the mee siam is just right in both flavour and proportion. Mee rebus is sprinkled generously with bean sprouts that adds a crunchy taste.

The name "Li Xiang" is derived from a Chinese idiom "the aroma of good food wafts through ten thousand miles". Owner Mr Quek Siow Chay, 55, started off in 1986 selling porridge, before moving on to frying you tiao and six years ago, he switched to cooking mee siam and mee rebus. "I need a bigger space to cook porridge, while cooking you tiao means taking in fumes. Hence I switch to these dishes after learning the recipe from a fellow hawker here," he related.

> Mr Quek revealed that he kept the price low to cater for the seniors. When asked about his secrets of having loyal fans, he said: "I cook from the heart. I even make my own chilli. I build my reputation through word of mouth over the years."

Ju Fu Yuan Vegetarian Delight Location: Mayflower Food Centre, #01-14 Brown rice with three ingredients @ $2.50 Vegetable curry @ $2, Lor Mee @ $2, Laksa @ $2 Coffee flavoured "ribs" @ $2.50

Nutritious, creative vegetarian food at rockbottom prices. If you find it hard to believe, this becomes a reality once you start munching away on the freshly prepared dishes from Ju Fu Yuan Vegetarian Delight.

Owner Mr Franky Chee, 38, revealed that the origin of the name is a pun on his Chinese name "集富", which means "accumulation of wealth". The stall name "聚福" denotes "accumulation of merits". When he was 16, he learnt culinary skills from a veteran chef in a seafood restaurant for three years. "He taught me about moral values first, such as not being wasteful. He would say: 'Will you eat the food that you cook yourself? If even you cannot accept it, how to serve to patrons?" He also let on that he has to remain standing for one whole hour when cooking chilli to ensure a high standard.

The vegetable curry is aromatic, while the brown rice retains much moisture and is soft – suitable for elderly folks' consumption. The coffee flavoured "ribs" are a delightful surprise. "Besides ensuring high quality ingredients, I also constantly adjust my recipe according to the feedback of residents," he said. He also allowed generous residents to pay in advance for free treats to the seniors.

Zhen Ming Pork Ribs Prawn Noodle Location: Mayflower Food Centre, #01-04 Lor mee @ $2.50 Prawn noodle soup @ $2.50/$3 Pork ribs prawn noodle @ $3

Mr William Chan (or Ah Choon) and Mdm Irene Teo run this humble prawn noodle stall. Their stall opens from 5am to 2pm daily, or until stocks run out. And it usually runs out fast; by 10.30am on a weekday, they were already out of some dishes. Their popularity boils down, literally, to the stock the couple makes from scratch.

The prawn noodle soup may be just $2.50, but it contains real sea prawn. The prawns are the base for a rich, sweet broth that is also light on the palate. The couple also uses black sugarcane and stone honey to make their broth, getting these supplies all the way from Tampines to ensure their broth keeps its unique taste. "A lot of people use rock sugar – too sweet," said Mr Chan. "Cooking the sugarcane and honey takes a lot of time," he added. He and his wife come to the stall as early as 2am to start cooking.

The bee hoon mee noodles in the prawn noodle soup absorb the stock well, and are deliciously slurp-worthy. The sliced meat is tender and sweet, indicating freshness. The version with pork ribs comes with a helping of soft and flavourful ribs, making for a fuller meal. The lor mee, at $2.50, is another must-try. Its gravy is wonderfully savoury, and portion of ingredients generous.

"里香"这个词汇来自成语"万里飘香"。摊主郭绍 星(55岁)述说,他在1986年开始卖粥,后来改卖炸 油条。6年前,他选择卖米暹与马来卤面。他说:"煮 粥需要更大的空间,炸油条则得吸入大量浓烟。我向 一位小贩学习怎么煮米暹与马来卤面后,觉得可行, 就煮这2道佳肴了。"

郭先生透露他维持低价是为了乐龄人士。问及他如何 保留忠实的食客时,他说: "我用心地煮每盘食物, 甚至亲手制作自己的辣椒酱。这些年,我的生意都是 靠口碑建立起来的。"

OUR RESPONSE MATTERS

A gunman at Northpoint City shot several shoppers and live-streamed his rampage on social media. But within minutes, swift-acting officers from the Singapore Police Force had him subdued. Singapore Civil Defence Force paramedics then rushed to the aid of injured shoppers. This live simulation at the latest SGSecure roadshow carried one key message: the public's coordinated response helps authorities effectively crack down on terror.

"What you saw today is an attempt to try and bring into the heartlands and malls, a greater awareness of SGSecure, and the need for us to be better prepared. We have to make sure that places like these are geared up," said Home Affairs and Law Minister Mr K Shanmugam, who launched the roadshow on 24 August at Northpoint City. He also joined fellow Nee Soon MPs Er. Dr. Lee Bee Wah, Mr Louis Ng, and Mr Henry Kwek in touring the roadshow that day. Assoc Prof Muhammad Faishal Ibrahim toured the roadshow at a separate time.

The roadshow's new interactive format features a simulated terror attack in a mock cinema, and interactive touch screen panels. Visitors were taught to spot a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device, and learnt cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), defibrillation, and first aid at the various exhibition booths.

"What you saw today is an attempt to try and bring into the heartlands and malls, a greater awareness of SGSecure, and the need for us to be better prepared. We have to make sure that places like these are geared up."

– Mr K Shanmugam

Many volunteers from local grassroots and religious organisations helped at the roadshow. "Practice makes perfect. Hosting the roadshow in a mall encourages the whole family to come down and learn how to save lives," observed Soh Li Lin, 28, a Community Emergency and Engagement (C2E) Committee volunteer.

Ali bin Salleh, 59, said SGSecure helps impart "good life-saving skills". As the Chairman of Ahmad Ibrahim Mosque, he supports the movement by encouraging mosque members who have participated in SGSecure to pass on their skills to others.

ADVERTORIAL =

You were out of work for more than a year. Did you have to make any major adjustments to your lifestyle?

It wasn't easy because living in Singapore is expensive. But my leave was a precalculated move so my family was not in a bad situation. We just had to be more cost-conscious and I changed my daily objectives and lifestyle. Instead of the typical office setting, my neighbourhood and environment became my workplace.

How did you go about doing that?

During the day, I shared food with my neighbours, allowing me to get to know them more on a personal level. These interactions gave me the time to observe what a HDB lifestyle is like during the weekday. It's very different from the times when we'd come home from work.

When you decided to return back to work, were there any challenges you faced during the job search?

There were a few problems during my job search. Initially, I wanted to re-enter product marketing in a different industry. I wanted to go into the Fast Moving Consumer Goods sector. However, most companies preferred candidates with experience in that specific industry so it was hard for me to find the right fit.

After being away from the workforce, was it difficult to transition back?

The hardest was struggling to adapt to working life again, being punctual and responsible, and investing my time with people. I wanted to create meaningful relationships with my colleagues that extended beyond work. So I had to ensure that everyone felt welcomed whenever I approached them.

How did you find about WSG's Career Support Programme?

I only found out about it from HR a few months after I joined. I guess they were just waiting to see if I was able to fit into the company and to be fair. I did not research much about it because for me, I focus more on the job-scope.

You've been in SICK for about a year. Do you think you benefitted from CSP?

Definitely! After joining SICK, they used part of the grant to invest in my training. As I have to market SICK's products to potential clients, they flew in a trainer from Germany to ensure that I could adapt well and understand their products. It took a lot of people to help me adapt and learn, and I thank SICK for giving me this opportunity and believing in me.

Discovering A Gem

As Managing Director (Southeast Asia) for SICK, Mr Andrew Ang has always been on the lookout for the best talent for the job. He shares why CSP was a great solution to the company's recruitment woes.

How did you find out about CSP

I chanced upon a Skillsfuture feature in The Straits Times and went onto the website, which led me to discover so many more programmes that we could tap on. CSP appealed to us because it was difficult to recruit people, especially seasoned engineers. Some functions in our company require engineers with years of experience and certain soft skills.

r did CSP benefit your manpower heeds

SICK was hiring for over three months for Jolene's role and with CSP, we were able to discover her. We appreciate that there is a platform for us to find the best fit for the company. And our experience was quite pleasant.

What advice would you give to future employers? There are a lot of hidden gems out there and I encourage hiring managers to keep an open mind. Hard skills matter, but soft skills and the willingness to learn is just as important.

Under the grant, SICK was able to enjoy up to $42,000 in salary support to hire eligible Singaporean citizens.

For Ms Jolene Wong, tapping on the Career Support Programme by Workforce Singapore helped restart her life in the working world.

HOME JUST

After working at Schneider Electric as a product market manager for over 10 years, Jolene Wong felt that she needed a break from work. So she left the workforce and decided to spend time pursuing her interests.

During her one and a half years of rest, the Nee Soon resident spent her time with her two children, establishing stronger relationships with her neighbours and picked up baking full-time with At-Sunrice GlobalChef Academy using her Skillsfuture credits.

But as the days went by, "I realised it's not my character to be a housewife," she quips. As such, she took steps to get back into the workforce.

Thanks to Workforce Singapore's Career Support Programme (CSP), she was able to secure a role at SICK Pte Ltd, a German-based producer of sensors and senor solutions for industrial automation applications. We sat down with Ms Wong to find out more about her journey back to work.

What is your role at SICK Pte Ltd and how did you find out about this position?

I'm a product market manager, mainly for SICK's smaller and intelligent sensors. Usually, I communicate with the company's Southeast Asian clients, helping them understand more about our products so that they can market them. I found out about this position through an agent and it turned out to be the right one.

Take personal responsibility for PMDs

Personal mobility devices (PMDs) have been banned from Housing & Development Board (HDB) block void decks and all HDB common areas* in Nee Soon since 1 September. This ban was effected after 15 Town Councils reported receiving almost 200 complaints about reckless PMD users within just one year. Police and surveillance cameras installed at public areas will help the Town Council identify errant riders. Reckless riders may be fined up to $5,000 or taken to court.

Common areas include void decks, corridors, staircases, lift landings, oncrete aprons, playgrounds, fitness corners and hardcourts.

"Remember that the new UL2272 fire safety standards will kick in by July 2020!"

Created by and for the residents, the Bright Spot programme is a groundup initiative that invites, encourages and involves residents to love and take ownership in keeping our community clean. The Launch of Bright Spots and Cleaner's Appreciation Day @ Yishun Greenwalk on 13 July 2019 was the brainchild of environmentalist trio Mr Kay Teck Hui (Greenwalk Residents' Committee Chairman), and members Mr James Png and Ms Jaslyn Lim.

Prior to the launch, a poster introducing all cleaners in Yishun Greenwalk estate and their respective blocks was put up. A Bitly link on the poster enables residents to express their words of appreciation. These words were then compiled in a "Thank You" card that was presented to the cleaners during the launch. MP for Nee Soon East Mr Louis Ng and residents partook in litter picking around Yishun Greenwalk, including Yishun Nature Park. A sumptuous lunch was provided, alongside art and crafts booths that kept children entertained.

"We believe experiences and feelings, fostered during experiential participation, will help us reflect on our relationship with the environment. Hopefully, it would subsequently transform our behaviour," Mr Kay said. While litter picking is a viable option, there are other avenues to explore such as going door-to-door or setting up booths to spread the awareness, he added.
